

ANSWERS INVESTIGATION PRESS RELEASE

Some Business Good News - Lily Elkington Private Detective

Every business news story seems full of doom and gloom – here is one that bucks the trend

With the world seeing redundancy around every corner, and lack of opportunity for young people

To go against the grain, Private Detectives Answers Investigation have recruited a new Apprentice private Investigator. 18 year old Lily Elkington started her Apprenticeship in mid-September and has already found her investigative feet, becoming involved in everything from Fingerprinting to Surveillance, Research and handling customer enquiries

Deferring University for a year, Lily was selected from 170 applicants for a position that was not even advertised, being posted only on the company website and social media

Of her new role, Lily says: “ Making initial contact with Answers Investigation, I was apprehensive of what my role would entail and the true extent of how involved I would be during my first weeks. I was quickly put at ease during a meeting with the team, prior to the start of my apprenticeship. Immediately I felt like a part of the team - right from the start I was being given active and hands on roles, including interviewing suspects in London and taking fingerprints. I never imagined to be given such interesting and invigorating roles straight away; however I was happily surprised. I am taught diligently, and everything is fully practised and researched”

“ I have rapidly had to become a City girl too – only this week I found myself on the top floor of an office building taking fingerprints for a FINRA application from executives of an Asset Management company – while trying not to be too distracted by the stunning panoramic view of Tower Bridge!”
